

Lynn M. Gangone, EdD, is vice president for leadership at the American Council on Education. She was, most recently, dean of Colorado Women's College at the University of Denver and clinical professor of higher education. Dr. Gangone was a visiting professor at The George Washington University Graduate School of Education and Human Development (DC) and a strategic planning consultant with Kaludis Consulting prior to her tenure at the University of Denver. She has served higher education as a faculty member, campus senior administrator, association executive, and lobbyist and policy analyst. Dr. Gangone is a seasoned higher education leader with both campus-based and association-based senior leadership experience.

Dr. Gangone has authored several book and journal articles on leadership and education, the most recent being a book chapter in Women in Higher Education Leadership, published by the International Leadership Association. She serves on the faculty of the Women's Leadership Institute, and the Higher Education Resource Services (HERS) Institutes for Women in Higher Education Administration, and is the leadership content expert for the American Physical Therapy Association Emerging Leaders Institute; she keynotes at various local, national, and international conferences and seminars on leadership across sectors. She co-created the Institute for Emerging Women Leaders in Higher Education, an American Council on Education award-winning leadership development program. Her research interests include higher education history, women's leadership development and advancement, and nonprofit organizational viability.

Dr. Gangone received an EdD and MEd in higher and postsecondary administration, with a concentration in organizations and leadership, from Columbia University (NY); an MS and CAS in counseling psychology from the University at Albany, State University of New York; and a BA in political science from The College of New Rochelle. She was a member of the class of 2010 Harvard Institute for Educational Management (MA) and is certified through Trustee Leadership Development.
